

ABSTRACT

It is an object of the present invention to provide a means which can increase the residence property at an affected site of a dental therapeutic agent such as a therapeutic agent for periodontal disease when such agent is applied to the affected site, and also can suppress the diffusion of the agent. The present invention provides a light-emitting device for medical use that is composed of resin comprising illuminant or fluorescence substance.